Q: Fluent NHibernate: Fetching a property of an entity and then showing in UI I am new to NHibernate and was wondering how I can fetch a property and show it in the UI. Let's say I have a User entity and a UserDTO class. I want to show the username in the UI. I am using Fluent NHibernate, so I was thinking something like this User currentUser = Session.Load(/*some id*/); UserDTO currentUserDto = new UserDTO(currentUser.UserName, /*other properties*/); and then just showing the currentUserDto in the view. The problem with this is that it doesn't fetch the currentUser entity. I was thinking of doing something like this instead. currentUserDTO = new UserDTO(currentUser, /* 82157476af
